Shinji

Human beings, who live through their unmei-jittai (their kokoro) raise their jittai the more they give back to society and live a life that is one with their unmei.

This is the human being (the person) who lives out a life without regrets.

To the Shinja

The effort to learn the teachings and raise your jittai is needed.

The more this conviction grows, the movement of the kokoro to go against the path is suppressed and many encounters will become the strength that sustains your life.

Economic activities are not what sustains life.

Meaning and purpose are achieved and experienced sustained by many encounters, thus you live with hopes and dreams.

Work—is to give back the strengths of your unmei to society and it is achieved when the best is mutually made of your many encounters.

Knowing the truth—the principle—about work, you must not forget to live and give back.

The more life is lived sustained by the teachings, human beings are liberated from their greed and become an existence who uses the strengths of their unmei to give back to society.

The life (the kokoro) of people, who achieve true meaning and purpose in life, is protected in the hands of Kami and they live with hopes and dreams.