

Shinji

Understand that as human beings live, all their encounters are about work.

Because the principle about work is not understood and work is seen as labor, you are unable to experience the unmei of people and all things.

This is why you suffer because you are unable to experience meaning and purpose and to have relations with people.

Work is about giving back—the conviction (the thought) to make the best of your unmei's strengths in society is what creates meaning and purpose.

Your experience with people and all things increasingly deepens and the best is made of your life.

To the Shinja

How well do you understand as you look deeply at your unmei-jittai (your kokoro)?

Learn the teachings and know the principles of life thoroughly.

You will gradually begin to see your life (kokoro) and accept all people and things with gratitude.

Your individual unmei begins to come together and your personal jittai is honed.

Encounters, where there is empathy and cooperation, begin and life improves.

The kokoro to give back blossoms and grows in a family where members learn the teachings together and abide by the principles.

The teachings bring out awareness in the human kokoro and foster people who guide society on the correct path.

The kokoro to give back fosters human beings and creates a peaceful society.
